The Democratization of Food – A Social Responsibility

Explore with us as we look into what our food choices say about us and what we say about others' choices. The Hans Falck Lecture Series looks into the how, why, and what could be in the area of food and nutrition, with a focus on the democratization of food. We have gathered experts to share their insights of the Food Culture. We will learn about sustainable agriculture and healthy eating resources and habits. We want to foster a culture where food choices are made based on nutritional needs rather than convenience, and a society where all can be empowered to eat and live healthy.
